

Employee Meeting 10 a.m., Tuesday, May 31, 2106 - Script of Mark Ruelle

Good morning.

At this point, you've heard the news that our board agreed Sunday that we're going to become a wholly owned subsidiary of Great Plains Energy, the parent company of KCPL, in a deal I'm confident will keep our company viable for the future.

You may have heard the news from your supervisor, or one of the many other ways we're spreading the news – but there's nothing wrong with hearing it from the CEO... and the guy who's going to be your CEO!

I'm pleased that Terry Bassham, Great Plains president and CEO, has joined us this morning. I've known Terry for years, working with him on issues at Wolf Creek and LaCygne. Please join me in welcoming Terry.

((PAUSE))

Given all the rumors, I know this isn't a complete surprise, and I'm sorry that I couldn't share more with you earlier. But as you can imagine, in a competitive process like this, it wouldn't be smart to say too much, too early.

For me, this announcement – with the agreement's favorable terms – is a sense of relief for our company, for Topeka, and our state.

As a well-regarded company, we were able to control our own destiny and join forces with a trusted partner who knows us, knows our customers, and knows our regulators and our state.

As I mentioned, this was a competitive process. Great Plains was the only one that provided us with the assurances we needed for our employees: honoring our labor contracts, maintaining our compensation and benefits and keeping our downtown Topeka headquarters.

As I'm sure Terry will mention in a moment, they're confident in the savings they need coming through natural attrition, by riding the wave of retirements in both companies. (But just as an "insurance policy," they also agreed to keep our non-union severance plan...and even make it better to fill in some gaps—like for relatively new hires.)

Those assurances, coupled with the financial terms are why we chose them as our partner...$60 a share! Most of that in cash, but some converted into shares of the now, much larger, Great Plains Energy.

This tremendous value is a testament to what you and your colleagues have helped create for our shareholders...which I know includes many of you, and maybe some of your family.

((PAUSE))

Great Plains also shares the same commitment we have for our customers, and our friends and neighbors, so they've agreed to maintain our community involvement and charitable giving too.

((PAUSE))

I know you have a lot of questions, maybe are even a little anxious. Now that the transaction is public, we'll provide ongoing progress updates.

Now, I'll turn things over to Terry. After his comments, we'd both like to address your questions. Terry...
